

Andrew Hall - Educator Bio

Andrew Hall is an active performing musician and music educator, with twelve years of active performing experience, seven years experience teaching in the Ohio public school system, and one year exclusively teaching private lesson instruction. A graduate of The Ohio State University's School of Music, he holds degrees in both Music Education and Vocal Performance.

In addition to performing in a variety of different venues, Mr. Hall has sung with the Cincinnati Opera, Opera Columbus, Bay View Music Festival, The Alcove Theater, and various community theatre groups.

Mr. Hall has spent his career in public music education teaching middle school and high school choir, preparing ensembles for concerts and competitions while teaching the fundamental building blocks of singing and musicianship. Mr. Hall has also worked with many students preparing to compete in Solo and Ensemble, with the majority taking home high rankings at competition. Previous solo voice students under his instruction have gone on to pursue university study and careers in music.

As a vocalist and a multi-instrumentalist, Mr. Hall coaches voice students in classical, jazz, musical theatre, choral, and contemporary musical styles. As an experienced performer both on stage and in informal settings, Mr. Hall also teaches interested students elements of stagecraft and skills for singing while playing an instrument. Mr. Hall works with students to create individualized instruction plans, taking into account their previous singing experience and their goals for themselves as singers and musicians.
